MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT

Municipal Government, as outlined in Miss. Code Ann. Title 21 et seq., may be structured under one of four organizational options: Commission, Council, Mayor Council and Council-Manager. State law creates three classifications for municipalities: cities, towns and villages based on population size.

It reflects data current as of May 1, 2013. Most Mississippi municipalities will hold general elections for city/town officials in June 2013. New municipal officials will be included in the online version of the Blue Book posted on the Secretary of State’s website.*

MUNICIPALITIES

Mississippi law classifies municipalities according to population size. Municipalities with populations of more than 2,000 are classified as cities. Places containing between 301 and 2,000 persons are considered towns. Municipalities between 100 and 300 persons are called villages. The State no longer provides for creation of new “hamlet” entities. Municipalities change classification according to the results of each decennial U.S. Census.

The city of Diamondhead in Hancock County, incorporated January 30, 2012, is Mississippi’s newest municipality. The city of Natchez is the oldest municipality in the State, incorporating March 10, 1803. Jackson, the State Capital, is the largest city with a 2010 U.S. Census population of 173,514.

Areas may incorporate to become a city, town or village by presenting to the Chancery Court a petition signed by two-thirds of the qualified voters who reside in the proposed municipality. The petition must describe the boundaries of the city, designate a name, identify the number of inhabitants, calculate the assessed value of real property within those city limits, state the reasons for incorporation, identify the services to be offered and provide a list of interim city officials. Once the Chancery Court approves the incorporation application, the Secretary of State then issues a charter for the new city. The charter is the city’s basic law or constitution.

The major function of Municipal Government is to provide services for its citizens such as maintaining roads and bridges, providing law and fire protection and furnishing health and sanitation services.

In Mississippi, State law establishes four types of municipal governments, as described in Miss. Code Ann. Title 21 et seq. (1972). In current practice, municipal government takes three basic forms organizing as either a mayor-council government, a commission government or a council-manager government.

Mayor-council governments – Voters elect a mayor and a city council, usually referred to as the board of aldermen. The number of aldermen varies from five to seven depending on the population of the city. Aldermen are elected from geographic districts called wards.

Depending on the powers granted the mayor, mayor-council governments are described as either a weak mayor type or a strong mayor type. The weak mayor-council form is the most widely adopted in Mississippi. Voters elect the mayor and aldermen who together decide whether other officials such as the city clerk or tax collector are elected or appointed. The mayor shares administrative powers with the aldermen including budget preparation. In the strong mayor-council form, the mayor has the power to hire and fire city employees and has a larger role in budget preparation. Under both forms, the mayor presides over council meetings and has veto power over council actions.

Commission governments – Voters elect a mayor and at least two commissions. The mayor presides over commission meetings but has no veto power. The mayor is the official representative of the city and administers major municipal departments while individual commissioners head other specific departments. The commissioners are elected from different wards and the mayor is elected at-large. (Jackson changed from a commission to a strong mayor-council form of government in 1985.)

Council-manager governments – Voters elect a mayor and council which, in turn, hire a city manager. The mayor presides over council meetings and represents the city. The council is the policy-making body for the municipality while the managers handles the day-to-day operations including the hiring/firing of city employees, budget preparation and fiscal management. The city manager attends council meetings but does not have a vote.
